National Safe Digging Month

Now that spring is here, you may be planning your landscaping and gardening projects. April is National Safe Digging Month and Wyoming Gas Company would like to remind you to always call 8-1-1 at least two days before you dig.

You must call 8-1-1 before digging for projects as small as planting trees/shrubs or installing a new mailbox, to larger projects such as installing a septic tank, swimming pool, or sprinkler system. The Common Ground Alliance (CGA)—an association that works to prevent damage to underground utility infrastructure—found that there were more than 130,000 reported damages in 2023 to buried utility infrastructure. Hitting a buried line can be a serious safety hazard and expensive to fix.

By making a simple call, you can help prevent injuries, property damage, and inconvenient utility outages. Remember to always call 8-1-1 before you dig this month, and all year long.

Plans for home improvement?

What happens when you call 8-1-1?

- When you call 811 at least two business days before digging, utility companies will come out free of charge to mark the location of underground electric, telephone, cable, water, sewer, and gas lines.
- Wyoming Gas Company marks its gas lines in yellow. A marking indicates the presence of a line but not its pressure or how deep it is buried.
- The markings are meant to guide your digging so that you avoid hitting underground lines. Remember to stay at least 2ft away from the utility line marking.

There are two ways to request a line locate:

- Call 8-1-1. Wyoming One Call operators take routine line location requests from 8am to 5pm on weekdays, except holidays.
- Make a request online. You may also request a line locate 24 hours a day by using Wyoming One Call's web portal www.onecallofwyoming.com to fill out an online request form. Your request will be processed the following business day.
